Introductory Remarks: Importance of having clear views of the chronology of any period, and of the intellectual character of the people, for the understanding of their history. Past I. The Chronology Of The Patriarchal Age: The difficulty of the subject--The three ancient versions of Scripture: their separate and independent character: their chronological disagreement--Necessity OF ADOPTING A SOUND SYSTEM OF CHRONOLOGY. I. WHETHER THESE Several Versions Ever Agreed In Their Chronology; and if so, which retains the primitive numbers--The Septuagint at first agreed with the then existing Hebrew, shown by reference to Ebel, Demetrius, Eupolemus, and Josephus: also by evidence from the New Testament--The Septuagint has now the same numbers. II. Whether Any Of The Versions Have Been Corrupted In This Respect. Proof that the Hebrew has, from the circumstances of the case--The fact attested by early Christian fathers: proved by reference to...
