

Pascoe, Prince of Gobir

By Ken Lupton

AuthorHouse. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 364 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.1in. The life story of a real early 19th century African, Pascoe, originally Abubakar, was a British navy seaman for 15 years. He then travelled extensively with a series of exploring expeditions. The first was with a colourful engineer, actor and pioneering discoverer of tombs and monuments of ancient Egyptian pharaohs. The second, after half died within a month, penetrated far into present day Nigeria, Pascoes home country. Next he canoed with two brothers all down the river Niger to discover its then unknown end in a delta with outlets to the sea. The disastrous final one used newly-invented steam boats. The story, told as if by himself, shows him developing cooking skills, then becoming a valued expedition member, after some earlier troubles. Lupton draws on writings of contemporary explorers and on an unpublished 15-page manuscript written in 1823, saying how he found it. He flavours the narrative with his experience of working for 35 years in Nigeria, and his imagination. Action packed, including Pascoes seven marriages, travelling blocked by slavers, a poison ordeal, escape from captivity and encountering pirates. Striking characters include The Fat Man who steals...
